It could be one of the following:

- One or more payments haven't fully processed. Pending payments are payments that are subject to minor delays from reviews. Payments are reviewed to protect merchants and payers from any malicious activity and ensure they are compliant with the WePay Terms of Service. It can take up to two business days to review pending payments. Bank payments can take longer to clear because payers must first verify their bank account information.
- The account holder needs to link their bank account. A bank account must be linked to WePay to receive funds. View the payment types page in your Keap application and click the 'connect your bank account' link to complete the process. Click here for more details.
- There are reserves on the account. WePay has a unique reserves system that balances getting merchant's their money as soon as possible while also protecting against risky elements like fraud. A portion of payments that WePay holds is used to protect merchants from chargebacks and disputes. Reserves are based on transaction history and information provided at sign-up such as the industry and how the merchant uses WePay.
